

Utah State University is engaged in a broad array of activities designed to facilitate international education and research. Many activities are embedded in departments and colleges. Key University-level offices and points of contact are highlighted below.

International Education Programs and Resources

Key offices associated with international education include the Office of the Provost, the Office of International Students and Scholars, the Study Abroad Office, the Office of International Cooperative Education and Initiatives, and the USU Intensive English Language Institute. The roles and responsibilities of each of these units are described below.

Office of the Provost

The Office of the Provost is responsible for the broad oversight and coordination of international education across the University. It assists in University diplomacy with foreign universities and government entities. It coordinates international contracts and educational programs abroad. It is also responsible for assisting students and scholars in obtaining Fulbright grants.

International Research

Office of International Program Development

The Office of International Program Development, under the Office of the Vice President for Research, provides technical support and assists faculty members interested in implementing collaborative international development projects around the globe. As a land-grant university, USU has long been involved in providing technical assistance and training to various countries around the world. Since the early 1950s, USU has implemented more than 125 major international technical assistance and training projects having a combined value of more than US$150 million. Much of USU's experience and development has made the University an international leader in the areas associated with irrigation and water resources; arid-land agriculture; livestock production on rangelands; dairy production and processing; management of natural resources; institutional building in research, extension, and education; and planning and implementation of skills development programs.
