Housing

You will live in an individual room in a family home stay, in a shared apartment with other international students or young professionals, or in a shared room within student residences. These pre-screened families, apartments, and student residences are located all around the city. Madrid’s excellent public transportation system ensures the internship sites are normally not more than a 45-minute commute. Breakfast and dinner will be provided in your home stay and in the student residences. In the apartments, you will be responsible for your own meals but will be provided with a weekly grocery stipend. While more and more homes now have internet access, internet cafes are abundant throughout Madrid. Your first three nights in Madrid will be spent in a hotel arranged by EUSA.

Interning abroad is one of the most rewarding decisions I have made during my university experience. The work I did really made a difference for the company, and some of the results that came from my work will be used in higher-up management financial decisions. I feel significantly more confident in my Spanish abilities.

Sophomore, International Business major

As an intern in the financial planning and analysis department of an international business travel management company, the student manages invoices, handles commission claims, and completes financial analysis projects:

As an intern at a travel magazine, the student researches and writes articles about points of interest in Madrid. The intern also reviews and edits content prior to issue publication:

"I really do feel that I am an important part of the magazine's publication, and I have gotten to experience the creation of a magazine from start to finish. For the last issue, I read and edited every single article that was published."

Junior, English major

“We want to congratulate [him] for the good work he’s done during these months at the company. He has always displayed a good attitude, he always seemed collaborative, and was always attentive to anyone needing help. Although Spanish is not his first language, he has coped easily and skillfully without any problems. Given his personality and good attitude, he has integrated into the team perfectly, contributing well to the work environment.” Deloitte Consulting

“[She] is a very well behaved person with an interest in learning and improving. She adapted to the existing team very easily and established a good relationship with the other members of the organization. She showed great interest in understanding the distinct care scenarios for the victims and has been well received by staff from the two care facilities.” Comisión para la investigación de malo tratos
