Effective for students beginning Psychology Major Summer Sem. 2009 thru Spring Sem. 2010

Admission Requirements For This Major

1. Students are admitted to the Department of Psychology as Pre-Psychology Majors by meeting the Utah State University admission requirements for new freshmen or transfer students.
2. To be a Psychology Major, a student must make written application to the Department of Psychology, after completing the following prerequisites:
 - a. Completion of at least 40 semester credits with a USU cumulative GPA of 2.75 or higher;
 - b. Completion of at least 18 semester credits of the University Studies requirements with a GPA of 2.75 or higher;
 - c. Completion of PSY 1010, 1100, 1400, 1410, 2800, and 2950 with a GPA of 3.0 or higher; and
 - d. Psychology Competency Pretest, which must be taken and reported to the Psychology Undergraduate Advising Office, Education 475.

The Program

Psychology is a field of study that provides students with a greater understanding of behavior—their own behavior, that of other people, and that of other living things. Whether students wish to use their degree to gain entrance directly into the job market, or whether they plan to continue with graduate study, the Department of Psychology is committed to providing a program geared to the needs and career goals of the individual student.

The requirements for this major, along with University and University Studies requirements, are summarized in this program sheet. Students are encouraged to use this sheet as a guide in developing their program of study and to contact and visit with their advisor on a regular basis about progress toward the completion of their degrees.

Career Opportunities

In addition to preparing students for graduate study in psychology and other areas, an undergraduate psychology degree can lead directly to employment. Employment opportunities for a student with a bachelor's degree in psychology are diverse. Although the department does not offer specific formal areas of concentration at the bachelor's level, other than the approved teaching major, the Psychology advising office will assist students in taking combinations of courses which might lead naturally to different employment opportunities. These areas include:

- applied behavior analysis
- educational applications
- general science
- human services
- organizational behavior
- personal development

Psychology graduates at the bachelor's level have been successfully employed as teachers, aides in psychological or psychiatric therapy units, industrial testing specialists, social service coordinators, child abuse case workers, public relations specialists, welfare case workers, psychologist's assistants, behavior measurement recorders, rehabilitation case workers, mental hospital program coordinators, foster care workers, child day-care center workers, science writers, ward attendants, job performance evaluators, job analysts, personnel selectors, personnel placement and recruitment officers, consultants, consumer behavior analysts, management trainees, interviewers, data collectors and analysts, organizational developers, laboratory research assistants, and many more.

To practice as a licensed psychologist in the USA, a doctorate degree and state licensing are required. Such psychologists typically work in private practice, university settings, clinics, and hospitals and in various other professional settings and have had four to five years training beyond the bachelor's degree level.

More information on career alternatives and assistance in selecting electives appropriate to a student's career goals may be obtained from the Psychology undergraduate advisor in Education 475.

Graduate School Preparation

The major in Psychology has been designed so that students take classes that will help them compete in applying for graduate school. Students planning to attend graduate school need to become actively involved with faculty research, form an association with Psi Chi, and enroll in independent research and readings courses. It is recommended that students take at least one upper-division course in statistics from Psychology, FCHD, or Sociology.

Skill Tracks for Undergraduate Majors in Psychology

The following skill tracks can be completed as part of a student's major in Psychology. A skill track represents a cluster of courses that help provide more comprehensive knowledge and practical skill in particular areas. After admission as a major in Psychology, students may apply for admission to a skill track. Completing a skill track requires careful planning, so that skill track courses and other required and elective courses for the major are fulfilled. Enrollment in a skill track is entirely optional for majors.

Behavior Analysis Skill Track. The following cluster of courses will provide psychology majors with a basic foundation in experimental and applied behavior analysis: PSY 1400, 1410, 3400, 4910, 5720; SPED 5010, 5050; BIOL 3010; and PHIL 4320 or 4900.

Interpersonal Relationships Skill Track. The following cluster of courses will assist psychology majors in systematically developing a broad range of interpersonal relationship skills, such as listening, assertiveness, negotiation, conflict resolution, and anger management: PSY 1210, 3210, 3510, 4210, 4510, 5200; and MGT 3710.

Human Service Case Worker Skill Track. In addition to the major, students can complete supplemental coursework within the Department of Psychology to qualify for employment in Utah as a Human Service Case Worker.

Degrees and Programs Offered Through This Department

Psychology: Bachelor of Science (BS), Bachelor of Arts (BA), Master of Science (MS), Educational Specialist (EdS), and Doctor of Philosophy (PhD)

Academic Advisement

All students should contact their academic advisor for assistance with course selection, program planning, and meeting graduation requirements. If they do not know who their advisor is, students should contact their department, college, or the Office of University Advising.

Graduation Requirements: BS* Degree in Psychology

*A BA degree requires foreign language training. For further information, see the Online General Catalog.

Psychology Teaching Major (43 credits minimum with 3.0 GPA)

Requirements for a Teaching Major in Psychology broadly consist of 27 credits of specified psychology coursework and 16 credits of elective psychology coursework, for a total of 43 credits in psychology. Only 16 of these 43 psychology credits may be taken in lower-division courses. The remaining 27 credits must be received in 3000- or 4000-level psychology courses. At least 12 of the upper-division credits must have been earned in courses completed at USU. A minor in another field of study is also required. Prospective teachers must complete 35 credits of the Secondary Teacher Education Program (STEP) in the Secondary Education Program of the School of Teacher Education and Leadership (TEAL). Required GPA for psychology courses is 3.0. Note: Most psychology courses list PSY 1010 as a prerequisite. Many of these psychology courses also have additional prerequisites as listed in the University General Catalog. Students must receive a grade of C- or better in all psychology courses (USU and transfer) in order to have them counted toward major requirements.
