

GUEST LECTURE

"RE-THINKING EARLY AMERICAN SLAVERY"

Prof. Philip D. Morgan
Johns Hopkins University

Monday, March 26, 2007
4-5 pm Old Main 326

The USU Department of History and the Bridgerland PATHS ("Teaching American History") Project invite you to attend a talk by one of the nation's most distinguished scholars in early American history.

Philip Morgan is Harry C. Black Professor of History at Johns Hopkins University. His work focuses on colonial British America with additional interests in African-American history and the study of the Atlantic world.

Prof. Morgan's 1998 study Slave Counterpoint: Black Culture in the Eighteenth-Century Chesapeake and Lowcountry won the Bancroft, Beveridge, and Frederick Douglass prizes. He is coeditor of Colonial Chesapeake Society (1988), Strangers within the Realm: Cultural Margins of the First British Empire (1991), and Black Experience and the British Empire (2004). Prof. Morgan has also edited the William & Mary Quarterly, the standard journal in early American history, and has won numerous prestigious fellowships, including a Guggenheim. He is working at the interface of Caribbean and North American history in the early modern era.

For more information about Prof. Morgan, see:
home page: http://web.jhu.edu/history/Faculty_Bio/morgan.html
c.v.: http://web.jhu.edu/history/Faculty%20CV/Morgan_cv.pdf
Slave Counterpoint: <http://uncpress.unc.edu/books/t-5730.html>

