INDEPENDENT COURSE APPROVAL FORM

The information on the Independent Course Approval Form is reviewed by the Department of Psychology Undergraduate Committee or by a Department of Psychology faculty member to define the amount of Utah State University credit that may be earned by the student on that project. The amount of time required to earn one semester credit in an Independent Course is determined by nature of the project and the student's duties within the project as well as if the time spent is volunteer or paid.

National guidelines dictate that students complete 75 hours of psychology-related paid employment to earn one University semester credit.

Sixty (60) volunteer hours per semester credit is required when the activity is mostly, but not entirely, psychology-related and the role of the student is to observe, assist, and implement a predetermined exercise. The supervisor usually is not a USU faculty member.

Forty-five (45) volunteer hours per semester credit is required when the activity is entirely psychology-related and when, in addition to assisting, the student is given some responsibilities within the project and is included in planning and evaluation discussions. The supervisor may or may not be a USU faculty member.

Thirty (30) volunteer hours per semester credit is required when the student is creatively involved in any part of the project proposal, design, implementation, or evaluation and/or routinely participates in decision making and is significantly responsible for the project. The supervisor is usually a USU faculty member.

Grades for credit in Independent courses are on a P-F basis unless the student requests and establishes written criteria for letter grading with the Direct Supervisor and Faculty Supervisor at the beginning of the project. Pass/Fail forms need to be submitted to the Registrar's Office.
