

Forest Taxation and Estate Planning Conference

January 26 & 27, 2005 - Provo Marriott

Thinking of passing-on the family forest?

One of the highest priorities for family forest owners is passing property to heirs, according to the National Woodland Owner Survey, which also found that families control 42 percent of the nation's forests. Within the next five years, ten percent of those families will pass property on to heirs. Join us for the next Forest Taxation and Estate Planning Conference to get the basics of estate planning, finance management, and tax issues associated with owning forest land. The conference speakers are USDA Forest Service specialists who focus on helping landowners manage their finances and taxes in an understandable and interesting way.
