Awards

Joyce Kinkead, Department of English, Council of Undergraduate Research Fellow. Biennially, the Council on Undergraduate Research honors two people for impact on undergraduate research and whose programs have gained national respect in academia. CUR is the leading national organizations for undergraduate research and also sponsors the National Conference on Undergraduate Research (NCUR), which annually invites several thousand undergraduates to present. Kinkead received an honorarium as well as a $5000 student fellowship, which she has designated for students in the Department of English. She gave the CUR Fellows address at the CUR National Conference in June, which was recently published in CUR Quarterly, “What's in a Name? A Brief History of Undergraduate Research.” Kinkead is the first humanist to be so honored by a CUR Fellowship. June 24, 2012

Anne Stark, Department of English. Glimmer Train’s Short Fiction Contest Honorable Mention Award for the short story, “Figs.” Notification: September 18, 2012.

Norman L. Jones, Department of History, Awarded the Jerry G. Gaff Faculty Award by the Association for General and Liberal Studies, a national organization for those who manage general education programs. It is given annually to a person who has demonstrated leadership on his campuses in the area of general and liberal education, shown evidence of outstanding teaching in general and liberal education courses, and has a record of achievement in curriculum development, innovation, or implementation in general and liberal education.

Kelsey Hall, Journalism & Communication, Awarded 1st Place Research Poster at the Western Region Conference of the American Association for Agricultural Education, Spring 2012.

Matthew LaPlante, Journalism & Communication, Ancil Payne Award for Ethics in Journalism, University of Oregon, May 17, 2012.

Matthew LaPlante, Journalism & Communication, Quintus C. Wilson Ethics Award, Utah Society of Professional Journalists. June 18, 2012

Kai He, Department of Political Science, Asia Studies Visiting Fellowship, the East West Center in Washington D.C. It is an international award. Totally there are three awardees, two from the United States and one from Singapore. The fellowship supports me to conduct research in Washington D.C. for three months. It provides $3,500 stipend per month and $1,500 for field research in Japan. Time period of the fellowship: June 2012-August 2012.

Kai He, Department of Political Science, EAI Fellowship, East Asia Institute (Seoul, South Korea). It is an international award. Totally there are five awardees, four from the United States and one from Australia. The fellowship provides $8,000 for conducting field research and delivering lectures in China, Japan, and South Korea for three weeks. Time period of the fellowship: May 27-June 16, 2012
PUBLICATIONS

Books

Book Chapter

Articles

Joshua Thoms, Languages, Philosophy and Communication Studies, Classroom discourse in FL classrooms: A review of the literature. Foreign Language Annals, 45 (Special Issue), s8–s27. (May 2012)

Creative Activity

Edward C. Pease, Journalism & Communication, Interview: Marcie Young Cancio, on censorship for Salt Lake Magazine, September 2012
Keynote Address

Philip Barlow, Department of History/Religious Studies, Keynote address, “Questions at the Veil.” Opening plenary address to the annual meeting of the Society of Mormon Philosophy & Theology, September 20, 2012

Panelist

Judge

Philip Barlow, Department of History/Religious Studies, Judge, National Juror, Evans Biography Award Summer, 2012

Editorial Work

