after winning both the Persian Wars, the Athenians’ spirits soared they threw themselves into the arts with unprecedented energy and confidence tragedy was among those arts, one which received much public attention the first tragedian whose work survives is Aeschylus (ca. 525 BCE - 456 BCE)

according to his tombstone, Aeschylus fought in the Persian Wars

but it does not mention his drama

according to him, then, his most important achievement in life was fighting for freedom, not writing plays
Aeschylus

Life and Times

• Aeschylus won the Dionysia for the first time in 484 BCE
• he produced his last known trilogy in 458 BCE: Oresteia (including Agamemnon)
• he wrote and produced over eighty plays during his life
• thus, he entered the Dionysia at least twenty times
Aeschylus
Contributions to Drama

• but only seven of his plays have survived
• most in school texts, cf. Epic of Gilgamesh
• nevertheless, we can see that he was the most important playwright of his day:
  – he won five or more victories at the Dionysia
  – later playwrights often referenced and imitated—and satirized!—his work
  – the audiences of the next generation enjoyed revivals of his drama
Aeschylus
Contributions to Drama

- Aeschylus introduced the second actor (hypocrites) to the stage
- thus, he was the inventor of dialogue in the conventional sense of the word, i.e. between actors (vs. actor and chorus)
- later, the principal actor came to be called the protagonist ("first contender")
Aeschylus
Contributions to Drama

- Aeschylus focused on creating language that was effective and affecting on stage
- his poetry is lofty, ornate and complex
- indeed, it is some of the most difficult to understand but most beautiful Greek ever written, cf. Shakespeare
- at times, his imagery is so dense that it was rumored he wrote his plays drunk!

The House of Atreus

• the story of the House of Atreus is the mythic cycle of Argos
• but Argos is not where Atreus’ family came from originally

Atreus’ Family Tree

Tantalus
(Lydia)

Pelops

• the story begins with Tantalus, the king of Lydia (Asia Minor)
• Tantalus was a favorite of the gods
• when the gods came to dine with him, he wanted to serve something special
• he cut up and cooked his son Pelops

Tantalus
(Lydia)

Pelops

• in some versions of the myth, he wanted to test the gods’ omniscience
• the gods mercifully restored Pelops to life and punished Tantalus in Hades
• he stands forever “tantalized” (thirsty and hungry) in a river by an orchard

- Pelops fled to Elis (NW Greece)
- the king of Elis was Oenomaus who had only one daughter Hippodameia
- Oenomaus raced her suitors in a chariot
- if the suitor won, he got Hippodameia
- if he lost, he was executed on the spot
Pelops was one of those suitors he sought the help of Oenomaus’ mechanic Myrtilus by offering him
Hippodameia on her wedding night
Myrtilus put “wax linchpins” in Oenomaus’ chariot
