INTRODUCTION

The Cooperative Institutional Research Program (CIRP) conducts national studies of American higher education and is administered by the Higher Education Research Institute at UCLA. An important component of this program is the CIRP Freshman Survey which has been in use since 1966. This survey covers a broad array of topics relating to first-year students including:

Demographic characteristics	College Finances
Expectations of college	Attitudes, values, and life goals
Secondary school experience	Reasons for attending college
Degree goals and career plans

A copy of the 2008 CIRP Freshman Survey Instrument is provided as Appendix I.

USU has participated in the CIRP Freshman Survey ten times during the last fourteen years, with the last time being 2006. At USU, the survey is administered during the summer as part of the Student Orientation, Advising, and Registration (SOAR) program. Students receive a copy of the survey at the beginning of SOAR and must return it to successfully complete the program.

The 2008 CIRP Freshman Survey was completed by 2,166 USU full-time, first-time students which represents 85% of the main campus freshman class. About 60% of the respondents were women, which compares to 57% of the total group, indicating that women are slightly over-represented in the survey data.

Responses to all CIRP survey questions are included as Appendix II. The appendix also provides responses by students from two peer groups. One group is all public universities that participated in the CIRP Freshman Survey in 2008. The other group is a narrower set of public universities that were designated as “medium selective.” These are institutions with average SAT scores (if ACT scores are used by the school, they are converted to their SAT equivalent) between 1,085 and 1,139. USU fits into this category.

Responses to all survey questions will not be discussed in the body of this report. Rather, the primary focus will be on a subset of items that reflects how responses by USU freshman students differ from those of their peers at comparable institutions—those at the “medium selective” public universities.

The remainder of this report is organized as follows. First, some basic demographics of USU’s freshman class will be reviewed. Second, their choice to go to college is considered. Why did they select USU? What is their intended degree? How will they pay for their college expenses? The third section focuses on their high school experience. What preparation did they have? How did they spend their time? Section Four considers lifestyle and religion. Survey responses indicate that USU freshman students are quite different from their peers in these areas. In section Five, the goals and viewpoints of USU vs. peer freshman are analyzed. Finally, selected responses by USU students to the 2008 CIRP Freshman Survey are compared to 2006, 2004 and 2001 responses. In discussing specific questions, the page number on which the 2008 data are found in Appendix II is provided in parentheses, e.g., (AII-5).

I. DEMOGRAPHICS

- USU freshmen are somewhat older than those from the peer institutions. (AII-1). The prevalence of older students reflects the number of young men who serve LDS missions prior to starting college.
- USU freshmen report higher high school grades (AII-1)—64% said their average grade was A- or better, vs. 52% for students at institutions of comparable selectivity.
- USU students tend to be closer to home (AII-1)—66% are 100 miles or less from their permanent residence vs. 47% for peers.
- Fathers of USU freshman are more likely to have a college degree (AII-7)—65% vs. 60%, but mothers are less likely—47% vs. 58%.
- USU students are more likely to come from homes where both parents are alive and living together (AII-2)—85% vs. 76%.
- Nearly 17% of USU freshmen plan on living with their family or relatives while at college (AII-1). About 45% intended to live in a university residence hall. In contrast, only 5% of those at peer institutions expected to live at home and more than 86% planned to live in campus housing.
- 96% of USU students are white/Caucasian vs. 83% of those at peer schools. (AII-13)
- 85% of USU freshmen stated that their religious preference is LDS. (AII-5)

II. COLLEGE CHOICE AND FINANCE

- About 62% of USU freshman indicated that they intended to obtain a graduate degree, compared to over 71% of students at the other schools (AII-2).
- 86% of freshman said that USU was their first choice for a college or university (AII-2). The percentage for peer institutions was 66%. USU was the second choice for 13% of students.
- 42% of freshmen reported that USU was the only college or university to which they applied (AII-2). Twenty-two percent applied to one other place and 17% to two other places. Students at peer institutions were more likely than those at USU to have applied to three or more other colleges or universities.
- Among reasons given for selecting USU, those with the highest percentage of students choosing “very important” were (1) very good academic reputation, (2) offered financial aid, (3) good reputation for social activities, (4) graduates get good jobs, and (5) cost. The five top ranked reasons for peer institutions were (1) academic reputation (2) good jobs, (3) social activities, (4) cost, and (5) financial aid. The importance of financial aid at USU stands out. Nearly 50% of USU students rated this reason “very important”, but only 32% of those at peer schools. (AII-14)
- Over one-fourth of USU freshman had previously taken courses for credit from USU (AII-1), but only 6% of respondents at peer institutions had taken such courses from their school.
- Only about 5% of new USU students reported that the chances are “very good” that they will transfer to another college before graduating (AII-18). Clearly, this is not consistent with actual practice, as a much higher proportion of students do end up transferring to another institution.

- Respondents were asked how much of their first year expenses they expected to be provided by parents, relatives, or spouses. The proportion of USU students who said none or less than $1,000 was 44%, while only 27% of those at peer schools said none or less than $1,000. (AII-3)
- Respondents were asked how much of their first year expenses they expected to be provided from their own resources (savings and other income). The proportion who said none or less than $1,000 was 39%, while 54% of those at peer schools said none or less than $1,000. (AII-4)
- 27% of USU freshman were confident that they will have sufficient funds to complete their college education; a proportion less than the 35% of students at peer institutions (AII-4).

III. HIGH SCHOOL PREPARATION/TIMEUSE

- The survey data provide the proportion of students who reported that they met or exceeded the recommended years of high school study in the following areas (AII-2):

English (4 years)	97% USU	98% Peer Schools
Mathematics (3 years)	95% USU	99% Peer Schools
Foreign Language (2 years)	63% USU	93% Peer Schools
Physical Science (2 years)	62% USU	67% Peer Schools
Biological Science (2 years)	50% USU	50% Peer Schools
History/American Government (1 year)	99% USU	99% Peer Schools
Computer Science (1/2 year)	91% USU	64% Peer Schools
Arts and/or Music (1 year)	93% USU	87% Peer Schools

Percentages are comparable, except that students at peer schools are much more likely to have studied a foreign language and much less likely to have taken computer science.

- Respondents were asked during their last year in high school, how much time they spent in a typical week engaged in various activities (AII-11, 12, 13). Percentages of students spending more than five hours are as follows:

Studying/Homework	39% USU	38% Peer Schools
Exercise or Sports	47% USU	52% Peer Schools
Partying	7% USU	17% Peer Schools
Working for Pay	60% USU	57% Peer Schools
Reading for Pleasure	15% USU	12% Peer Schools
Playing Video/Computer Games	7% USU	12% Peer Schools
Participating in Online Social Networks	5% USU	16% Peer Schools

USU students party less and spend less time at online social networks such as Facebook.

IV. LIFESTYLE AND RELIGION

Most USU freshmen come from Utah and the surrounding states and, according to the survey, LDS is the religious preference for 85% of them, while only 7% indicated no religious preference (vs. 23% stating no preference at peer schools. (AII-5). As a result, it is not surprising that aggregate responses of USU freshmen tend to reflect those of the LDS life-style. For example,

- Less than 0.5% of USU students “occasionally” or frequently” smoked cigarettes during the last year compared with 4% of peers (AII-6).
- About 3% of USU freshmen “occasionally” or” “frequently” drank beer during the last year vs. 38% of those at peer schools (AII-6). The proportions for wine or liquor were 4% and 42%.

- 94% of USU students “occasionally” or “frequently” attended a religious service during the last year compared to 76% of peer school respondents (AII-6).
- 63% of USU freshmen “occasionally” or “frequently” discussed religion vs. about one-third of those at peer schools. (AII-6).
- During their last year in high school, the proportion of USU students who spent more than five hours during a typical week partying was 7% vs. 17% for those at peer schools (AII-11).

V. LIFE OBJECTIVES AND SOCIAL/POLITICAL VIEWPOINTS

- CIRP participants were provided with a long list of life objectives (AII-17). The four objectives most likely to be considered “essential” or “very important” by USU freshmen are listed below. They are the same “top four” as students at peer institutions, although the percentages differ.

1. Raising a Family	90% USU	77% Peer Schools
2. Being Very Well Off Financially	71% USU	76% Peer Schools
3. Helping Others Who Are in Difficulty	74% USU	67% Peer Schools
4. Becoming an Authority in My Field	53% USU	57% Peer Schools

- USU and peer group students differ significantly on some life objectives. Percentages rating the following objectives as “essential” or “very important” are as follows: (AII-17)

Adopting “green” practices to protect the environment	28% USU	46% Peer Schools
Becoming a community leader	21% USU	32% Peer Schools
Making a theoretical contribution to science	12% USU	24% Peer Schools
Becoming successful in a business of my own	33% USU	40% Peer Schools
Obtaining recognition from colleagues for contributions to my special field	39% USU	56% Peer Schools

- Students were asked how they would characterize their political views (AII-9). Only 10% of USU freshmen said far left or liberal, compared to 34% from the peer group. Forty-seven percent of those at USU classified themselves as conservative or far right vs. 24% at the other schools.
- When asked about their views on social and political issues, the proportion of USU students who said they “strongly” or “somewhat” agree with the survey statements differed by ten percentage points or more from those at the peer institutions on eight of the twenty-one items (AII-10).

Abortion should be legal.	21% USU	58% Peer Schools
Marijuana should be legalized.	12% USU	40% Peer Schools
It is important to have laws prohibiting homosexual relationships.	55% USU	24% Peer Schools

Same-sex couples should have the right to legal marital status.	27% USU	65% Peer Schools
Colleges have the right to ban extreme speakers.	63% USU	42% Peer Schools
An individual can do little to change society.	18% USU	26% Peer Schools
Only volunteers should serve in the armed forces.	60% USU	68% Peer Schools
The federal government is not doing enough to control environmental pollution.	62% USU	77% Peer Schools
Addressing global warming should be a federal government priority.	50% USU	72% Peer Schools

VII. SUMMARY AND CONCLUSIONS

Responses to the CIRP Freshman Survey provide interesting and useful insights regarding the USU freshman class and how it differs from the incoming class at comparable institutions. Synthesizing the results, the following conclusions may be drawn:

- The permanent residence of nearly 66% of freshmen is within 100 miles of USU, 85% come from homes where the parents are alive and living together, and less than half the students will be living in university housing. These factors tend to make it more difficult to establish a sense of community among new students at USU. Home is close and the draw of family may be quite strong.
- Based on information collected when taking the ACT, it has been assumed that USU was not the first choice of a college or university for freshmen. The CIRP data contradict this view. 86% of respondents reported that USU was their first choice and over 40% said that they did not apply to any other institution. More than one-fourth of first-year students had already taken for-credit courses from USU.
- USU freshmen seem to come to the university with the intent of graduating, only 5% reported that the chance is “very good” that they will transfer to another institution. USU’s relatively low retention and graduation rates suggest that something happens later to change that intention.
- Finances are a concern. Only 27% of USU first-year students are confident that they will have sufficient funds to complete their college education, compared to 35% of those at peer schools. USU students are less likely than the comparison group to rely on family resources to finance their educations and are more likely use their own earnings and savings than at the peer institutions.
- Considered as a group, USU freshmen have a somewhat different lifestyle than new students at other schools. They are less likely to smoke and consume alcohol and more likely to attend religious services.
- Freshmen at USU are more conservative in their social and political views than their peers. They are much less likely to support abortion, legalizing marijuana, and same-sex marriage rights. The views of USU freshmen on these matters have changed little since the 2001, 2004, and 2006 surveys.
