When individuals experience sexual misconduct (sexual harassment, sexual assault, relationship violence, and sex-based stalking), they may turn to a university employee to talk about their experience. Most university employees have been designated as resource connection employees.

Resource connection employees are all employees that are not identified as a reporting employee or a designated confidential resource. Resource connection employees are not required to report information about sexual misconduct to the USU Title IX Coordinator, but are required to share information about designated confidential resources and reporting resources. More information is available in interim USU policies and procedures 339, 339A, and 339B and at equity.usu.edu/sexual-misconduct/employee.

IMMEDIATE THREATS

If you think there is an immediate threat to an individual, dial 911.

IF YOU RECEIVE A DISCLOSURE

1. INFORM the individual that their disclosure to you as a resource connection employee will not result in a report to the USU Title IX Coordinator or initiate university action. Explain that although you are not required to report information about sexual misconduct to the USU Title IX Coordinator, you can make a report if you provide the individual with advance notice.

2. LISTEN without judgment if the individual would like to discuss their experience with you. Respond with compassion, avoid questioning their experience, and express your support.

3. PROVIDE the individual with information about designated confidential resources and reporting options, including how to report to the USU Title IX Coordinator, listed on sexualrespect.usu.edu. You can also give them a copy of the sexual misconduct resource guide, if available. Explain that if the individual chooses to report to the USU Title IX Coordinator, they will share information about supportive measures, reporting options, and the investigation process.

4. DOCUMENT your conversation with the individual, including the date, whether you shared information about designated confidential resources and reporting options, and if you helped the individual contact support or reporting resources.

If you have questions, please contact the USU Title IX Coordinator by calling 435-797-1266, visiting Old Main 161 in Logan, or via email at titleix@usu.edu.

SUPPORTIVE MEASURES

USU Office of Equity Supportive Measures Specialists
The university may offer supportive measures to individuals (students, faculty, and staff) who have experienced sexual misconduct while at the university. Supportive measures are designed to address an individual’s safety and well-being and to allow the individual continued access to educational or employment opportunities. The Supportive Measures Specialists are not a designated confidential resource, so information shared with them may also be shared with the USU Title IX Coordinator.
